SINGLE PERSONAL AUTHOR

Books are produced by the authors, who are directly responsible for the thoughts and expressions contained in the books. Without an author the book is impossible. The author may be personal or corporate. Personal author are those which are chiefly responsible for the creation of the intellectual or artistic contents of a work. When the author of a book is personally responsible for the thoughts contained in the book is called personal author.

A book may be written by a single author or may be by two or more authors. When a single person is personally responsible for the authorship of a book, is called single personal author. Thus we can say that when the author of the book is one person, he is called single personal author.

Two personal Author

JOINT PERSONAL AUTHORS

Many books are written by more than one personal author, i.e., by two or more authors, in such situation, it cannot be determined that how much contribution is paid by each author in writing the book. When the books is written by two or more authors, then the users/readers may remember the name of one or more of the authors, therefore we have to pay equal weightage to each one of them. The all other authors except the first are joint personal authors.

In AACR-2, if a book is written by more than one author, then it is called the Works of Shared Responsibility. The heading for such cases in main entry depends upon the number of authors. The names of the authors are normally printed alike on the title page of the book, but in some rare cases any one of the authors is given prominence either by wording or by typography.

PSEUDONYM NAME OF THE AUTHOR

Sometimes authors hide their real name intentionally and write the book under an assumed name. The assumed name is called pseudonym, and the author is called Pseudonymous Author. In some cases two or more authors join together and write under one Pseudonyms. Interesting part is that when an author writes his real name as well as assumed name. In this regard, AACR-2 recommends the following rules for solutions.

Multivolume Books

Generally books are published in a single volume. When the whole thought contents cannot be accommodated in a single volume of the book, then it is published in two volumes or in multivolume. Thus the books published more than in one volume is called multivolume book. The multivolume books are published in different ways as follows:

- i. The title page common to all the publications.
- ii. Each volume has its own title besides the common title to all the volumes.
- iii. All volumes may have continuous pagination or separate pagination for each volume.
- iv. Each volume may or may not have the same year of publication.

4. CORPORATION AUTHORS 1 GOVERNMENT

Usually books are written by author individually or jointly. Sometimes books are not written by any individual but several bodies/agencies publish books under their names. They are called Corporate Bodies or Corporate Authors. In AACR-2, a corporate body is an organization or group of person that is identified by a particular name and that acts as an entity. The best known examples of corporate bodies are government, different agencies of the government, religious bodies, association, institutions, conferences, fairs and festivals and so on.

AACR-2 recognized the following types of corporate bodies as the authors.

- A. Government and its officials/ agencies
- B. Committees and Commissions
- C. Institution, Associations and Societies
- D. Conferences, Seminars and Symposiums.
